INTRODUCTION

There is a beautiful little Dutch settlement located near the stunning river of Gouwe. The name of this small hamlet, Boskoop, is a mesmerizing place indeed; yet just over the rise and down past the lowlands, which is just a good stretch of the legs, is the cheese market and main townhall of the city of Gouda, a much larger city of splendor, all located in the Netherlands.

The youth of Boskoop dream of one day moving to Rotterdam to find prosperity and happiness in a larger city. Hopes and dreams that would materialize for the majority of the young seekers who dared to venture forth.

There is a man of sixty-two, Johan Smit, who is the proprietor of a tiny repair shop not too far from the center of the village of Boskoop. Not very tall, five-feet four-inches, balding, with some short gray hair which matches his short gray goatee. Slim of build, weighing somewhere around one-hundred and ten pounds or thereabouts. Behind his dark, thick rimmed glasses can be found sparkling hazel-green eyes.

Johan lives a quiet, laidback life, working Monday to Friday from sunup to noon at his little shop; for he has no wife or children. In the rear area behind his shop, he has two wooden rocking chairs separated by a small wooden table, which contains a glass jar of medium size in the center of the table. There are several large trees to provide shade, and there is always a pleasant breeze.

From noontime till dark, and every Saturday he caters to anyone who comes by seeking guidance or information on any topic, personal or otherwise. Johan is known, far and wide, as the local soothsayer. Many in Boskoop, Gouda, and quite a few from all around the world come to have him look into their past, present and future as it were; doctors, house wives, lawyers, city people, entrepreneurs, farmers, spiritual seekers, and just plain everyday common folk.

Johan asks for no money, as he feels this is a service he does freely to help his fellow man; yet many place coins and paper-money in his glass jar for his personal time and answers to their questions.

His ability, to bring forth information from the great beyond came to him in his mid-thirties. It was there all along, but he never paid it no mind until one day, late in the afternoon, he was working in his shop when a voice spoke to him. Startled at first, he sat quietly at his work bench as the female voice told him his father and mother had just perished in an automobile accident while they were shopping in Gouda.

The female voice told him the exact time, place and how the accident had played out. Johan was stunned yet didn't fully believe what he was hearing inside his own head, so he promptly dismissed it as his own imagination getting the better of him.

The following day, he was dumbfounded when a policeman knocked on his door with the sad news of his parent's death. The officer explaining what happened almost word-for-word as told to him by the 'female voice.'

As time passed, he decided to listen to the voice and pass on what was given to him from the great beyond. When he asked what he was to call the voice, she simply replied she went by the name 'Zelda.' As Johan didn't know much about psychic's or medium's, later on he simply called himself a soothsayer. No advertising does he do, word of mouth sends most people his way. Whatever Zelda brings forth is what he passes on, he makes no judgment on what is given.

The following are questions asked by various individuals and the answers provided by Zelda. They appear in no particular order or sequence.

Chapter 1.

(Wahna Jackson, Social Worker, age 28)

Johan Smit:

Welcome, and how may I help you this evening?

Wahna:

I'm getting married next month, my life partner, Nadia, will be at the altar standing with the minister. I didn't want to walk down the aisle by myself. So, I wanted to know if I could make contact with my mother and see if she would be there by my side in spirit as I make my way up the aisle?

Johan:

Very well, I have your mother here now, she says she would be very happy indeed to fulfill your loving request, but she says your father should be the one to escort you down the marriage aisle.

Wahna:

What?! Does she not know what he did to me after she died?! A week after she was buried, I came out to my father that I was a lesbian. I needed him, I was so heart broken and depressed over mothers' sudden death, I was only sixteen.

That bastard slapped me in the face and said no daughter of his would disgrace the family by being such a despicable thing. He said I was damned to eternal hell for violating the scared words of the holy bible and that God would surly punish me in this lifetime as well as in the hereafter.

My father threw me out on the street. I moved in with my best friend, Nadia and her family, they were already aware of Nadia's sexuality and had no problem embracing it. They were very open minded and tolerant people.

Two years later, I was notified of his death...needless to say I did not attend his funeral.

Johan:

Your mother says she knows what happened between the two of you, and it saddens her very much that you two are still so far apart, for love knows no boundary in this world or that world.

She wants you to know that your father was raised in a very strict religion from childhood to adulthood. He was afraid God would punish him if he didn't hold to the sacred words of his bible.

Yet, since crossing over, he has seen the truth of spirit, and now knows how religion controlled him throughout his life with its falsehoods and lies.

Your father is here and wants you to know how profoundly sorry he was for casting you out into the street. He understands now how loving and caring you and Nadia are toward each other. He can apologize a million times and knows that would still not be enough to undo the wrong he has done to you.

Your father has stayed close to you as he can from spirit and sends healing love to you and Nadia each and every day. His desire is that one day you may understand and overlook his weakness in that lifetime and see him for the loving and gentle soul he has become.

He loves you so very much and is proud of the life you are now living.

Wahna: (sobbing)

Tell him I forgive him, I always knew deep in my heart he loved me. Would my mother and father be willing to escort me down the aisle at my wedding?

Johan:

They both say they would be very honored to escort their beautiful daughter down the aisle to what they see as a wonderful and exciting life for the both of you.

Wahna: (still overcome with emotion)

I love you so much, I'm so happy now...

Chapter 2.

(Wolfgang Zimmer, Dr. of Oncology, age 57)

Johan:

So, what brings you here today my dear sir?

Wolfgang:

In my many years of treating patients, I have seen some amazing things. Some people survive when there was no hope of survival, none what-so-ever, they were in the last stage of the disease and should have died, yet miraculously they not only lived, they had a full recovery and were cancer free just a short time later.

Others, who were diagnosed early on and should have responded to treatment went on to die, no matter what I tried; chemotherapy, radiation, immunotherapy, diet...nothing worked, but it should have. So, I come seeking to understand this dreaded disease with an open mind and heart.

Please, any information would be gratefully welcomed, I feel like such a failure when my patient's look to me to save them, and I cannot.

Johan:

Well, first off, my guide Zelda says it is very good to see that you are such a caring and compassionate fellow. There are many in your profession who are more into the status of being called a doctor and care more for the wealth it affords them, the privilege, as opposed to truly wanting to help their fellow man when they are at such a pivotal point in their lives.

With that being said, Zelda says cancer occurs when the person is deficient in one of the following; lacking change, love, focus or a grip on what true reality is in this person's perfect existence.

Therefore, while they are in this state of being, a change is required. They may need to change their health emphasis and aptitude, or a change in their life routine, or they need to refocus their intention so that they are living more fully and present in their current lifetime.

Some simply need to release current unexpressed emotional baggage that has built up to overwhelming levels, while others find themselves still holding onto excessive emotional disturbances from past lifetimes.

There are many things here that can contribute. As we have stated before, there are many reasons this can manifest – your predetermined path, your continued path – one being reasons not truly caused by this lifetime other than your presence in it, the latter being what you are engaging in here and now with your thoughts, actions and energies. While difficult to understand at times, this can be caused by many energetic levels, though many concern themselves with the physical – the diet, exercise, chemicals, medicines – and completely ignore the other reasons or possibilities.

Other aspects confound those who are acknowledging these aspects, but do not realize the full strength and weight of what those previous thoughts, actions, and energies have contributed.

A simple illustration are the scales of justice. Your entire existence, and possibly, in those lifetimes before, you have been piling thoughts, actions, and energies on one side of the scale. If now, you start a new direction, often it may not initially carry the same energetic weight as all the previously conducted energy that is present on the opposing side of the scale. At this point, without change after starting the new focus or path, many give up. It is important that you understand this.

Positive is not positive just for the sake of positivity. It requires as much energy and effort as the previously applied energy before it will entirely cancel or reverse this energy. Do not confuse this with a literal balancing of energy, what you have present is cause and effect.

Many will argue that there is a great cure for cancer and that it is a hidden secret from humanity for the sake of financial lordship of the population of the planet. This is true.

However, before sharing confirmation of your conspiracy, realize these things and the greater deception that they have been hidden from you: You are a powerful being. You have the ability to create with your mind and bring the creation into physical existence. Your intention is powerful, often more powerful than the physical action, is the intention behind the action. Action without intention is devoid of any true meaning and purpose. Your thoughts, actions, and energies all carry a vibration – your belief or thought about cancer, the treatment process, and every other relating aspect will be true until you find another truth with which you resonate.

It is not a simple pharmacy trick to reverse cancer. It is the intent, it is the thought, action, and energy behind the term ‘cancer’ which causes a deeper change of being. It is not simply the pill, nor the IV, nor any other medication. A placebo will have the same or greater effect if your belief upon it is as strong as the belief that, so many hold for the treatment of cancer either curing or killing them.

There are many natural cures, many things that are not utilized by medicine, that do afford greater support for the individual while they are in this time of transition and redirection of thought, action, and energy. It is important that you see this as a time for redirection or refocus. This is not simply a time to give up, and while this may have a predetermined action for those around you, you are not the one necessarily responsible for the change, your purpose is to redirect and undergo your own personal shift.

The outside must be cautious however, in how they support the person through the cancer process. If you are of this truth and understanding it can often be easy to blame those as being not of right mind, body, or spirit. You cannot force this perception, more often it cannot be forced because of the manner in which so much energy and effort is contributed to the idea of cancer.

Truly, your belief, your redirection, the support and unity of those around you, the refocus of thought, action, and energy can support your transition into a new phase. The cause is unimportant as it can come for many reasons from before now and from the now, it is important to assess and reassess, as even the path to the new paradigm can change many times.

This is all Zelda has to say for now on this subject. Go and think about what has been conveyed to you. Seek within yourself for more clarity, for there you shall find your truth.

Wolfgang:

Yes, I shall indeed, thank you so much for your wise words.
