The truth is people are hungry for information and they search the internet for it, if they are on your blog, the chances are they were looking for the information your blog supplies and if that is good information they are more likely to take a look at the ads you have running on your blog for related information. If they like the sites that you earn commission from enough to buy, then they get a great problem solving product and you get a commission for connecting someone with it, so everyone is happy. I want to keep this eBook short and sweet and user friendly so it doesn't look like a daunting complicated way to generate an extra or multiple incomes, because the simple fact is setting up mini blogs is easy once you know how. But since people place value on quantity rather than quality, I have included images of every single step through setting up a blog and adding contextual ads.

Towards the end of this manual you will also notice a page asking for your feedback and any tips you have found useful. Some of these tips will be included within the 2^{nd} edition of this eBook. Should you like to have your name included next to your comments, please say so in the e-mail.
