WEDDING ATTIRE

Swethaa Selvam

“Weddings are decided in heaven”...This is a very famous proverb in Tamil. Wedding happens once in a life time (nowadays more than once). People dream about making their wedding a very memorable one, something they could never forget in their lifetime... Dresses play an important role in every wedding. In present world people spend more money for buying their wedding dress. Dresses depend on their culture and tradition. I would like to present a glimpse of wedding dresses of different cultures of the world.

India is a country where diverse cultures flourish. Here wedding attires depend on the religion and the region

Hindus

Dresses for Hindu wedding greatly depend on the region or state. South Indian men wear traditional White Dhotis and some people wear Pancha which is Dhoti tied in a different style. It is often paired with White Shirt and colorful Turban. North Indian grooms wear colorful heavily embroidered Sherwanis with matching Turbans.

Women in India are generally noted for colorful Saris. South Indian Bride is generally made up with Saris made of traditional Kanjeevaram silk. Kerala women wear cream colored Saris with colorful Blouse. The jewels they wear makes up for the dull color of saris. Brides in North India are characterized by heavily worked Lehengas in colors like red or gold.

Christians

Christianity is a world religion. In India Christian women wear white Prom Dress or Gown with a Veil and a Bouquet. In some South Indian Christian weddings bride wears Sari. Bride Groom wears White Shirt, Black Suit and Tie with black pants.

Muslims

Wedding of Muslims are much more colorful. The bride's dress is called Gharara Sharara which is similar to wedding gowns except for they are fully covered and has long sleeves. It is paired with a matching Veil or Hijab.

Groom dresses according to their culture, normally sherwani or Suit and Tie.

Sikhs

Punjabi weddings are celebrated with great joy. Bride wears bright Salwar Kameez or Lehngas. Groom wears sherwani with colored Turbans.

Similarly different countries have their own culture and tradition for wedding attires.

Japanese

Japanese bride wears white dresses usually Kimonos. Kimonos are dresses with loosely fitted sleeves. They wear a matching white headpiece. Groom wears Coat Suit and Tie.

Chinese

China is a country of great tradition and culture which is reflected in their costumes. Red color and Kimonos with a matching Head Piece play a major role in Chinese weddings. Brides in Northern China usually wear a Frock called Qipao embroidered with elaborate Gold and Silver design. Brides in Southern China prefer to wear double piece dress named Qungwa or Kwa embroidered with Gold Dragons and Phoenix.

Cheongsam is a traditional embroidered Shirt with a Jacket worn with a long skirt like Gown which is worn by the Groom.

Africa

Unlike other wedding cultures African weddings are very colorful. The Bride is dressed up in Gowns which can be of any color, with big Head Ties that are sometimes contrasting. Traditional beads and accessories compliment their dresses.

Bridegroom wears Shirts and Pants in traditional style with bright Prints.

Norwegian

wedding include Crowns for Brides. Black or White embroidered Aprons are worn over Red Frocks paired with Flower Crowns or Metal Tiaras. Men wear Shirts and Pants in traditional style along with Hats.

Swedish

Brides wear Flower Circlets around their shoulders in addition to Gowns and the Bridegroom wears Lace works over their Shirts.

Weddings have their own significance, so are the dresses and accessories. Weddings are decided in Heaven and Wedding Attires make us feel Heaven.

HOSTEL LIFE

Sunny Singh

Living in a hostel is a rite of passage. It makes you stronger by throwing daily struggles at you. Even who has lived in a hostel is familiar with certain daily struggles. Whether it is money problems or love problems, you have seen the ugly side of hostel life, often in the most hilarious manner.

THE GREAT WAR WITH FOOD.

Everything is better than mess food. Isn't it? Hostel food is not made to please the tastebuds. Still, every mealtime results in a horde of people trying to outrun each other to get the food first, obviously "first come first served". The days when there is something good in menu, Aahaan!!!

THE STRUGGLE FOR MONEY.

You will have that one friend in your group who is always broke, and more often than not, whether because of unusual indulgences or by just a tight hold on pocket money by parents or bad money management or may be because of that girlfriend, there is always some money trouble for hostellers.

THE STRUGGLE WITH AUTHORITIES.

While living in a hostel does give you a taste of independence, there is always a figure of authority, whether it is the warden or the security or both together. You have to stay on friendly terms with them so that they will not trouble, which can lead a peaceful life in hostel but beware that you don't trouble apple of their eye, which can put you in serious trouble, they mostly are called warden's wingman a.k.a informers or undercovers or secret agent or %#@#^*.

THE ROOMMATE STRUGGLE.

A hostel room or dorms not exactly a haven for those who treasure their privacy. You learn to adjust to your roommate(s), mostly compelled to do so and their quirks, and face the daily struggle of disagreements exasperation, jugaad and strained friendship with them. Their annoying nature has now become a part of your life and irony is; you can't help them neither yourself.

The DIY Struggle.

Once you leave the home for hostel, you also leave behind the luxury of your mother or domestic help doing all your chores for you. Get prepared to clean, wash, cook and scrub. Although go back to home and you are not changed but the same, leading same luxury of your mother doing everything for you.

THE BATHROOM STRUGGLE.

A community bathroom is perhaps the most troublesome part of hostel life, there is always someone who never flushout, cleanliness issues in toilet is a major issue and seriously you can't bear that smell. The silent fight for mirror space and many things, every hosteller has suffered the ultimate struggle in the bathroom.

THE WAKING UP STRUGGLE.

Now this is something really serious. By the time, all hostellers learns to snooze the alarm until the the very last moment and still manage to make it to the class on time, ninja-style with disheveled hair and barely held up dress. Wish could had woke up 5minutes earlier. Okay! Lets give a try tomorrow.

A worthwhile experience,HOSTEL LIFE.

SONG OF LOVE!

Vishwanathan MJ

My beloved, listen to my heart..

Let your sweet tender lips unfurl the cute smile out..

For your happiness is the symbol of our future..

Hey,the mistress of my palace..

Shed not tears, my cupcake..

For, LOVE, that joined us to the peak of merry and comfort,

And that opened our hearts out to each other,

Shall bless us with intense patience..

As, everything is for the good,

And be consoled in our delay..

For, our love would flourish in all adversities,

For,it is in the name of love, that we are suffering the situational obstacles and emptiness of separation..

Triumphing over all obstacles,

From The Heart

And, in your hands, will I place,
The strength, which will guide at ease over everything,
To complete the journey of our life..
Love , The Almighty to me, will consider our sufferings and tears,
And,will reward us with a mighty fortitude..
Love,something not flattered by riches and power,
Shall take us through all situations affected by the concepts of wrong and right doing..
Else, beyond all the concepts of wrong and right doings,
There is a field..
I will meet u there...
Till then.."be strong sweetheart..and goodbye.."

WHAT WENT WRONG!!!

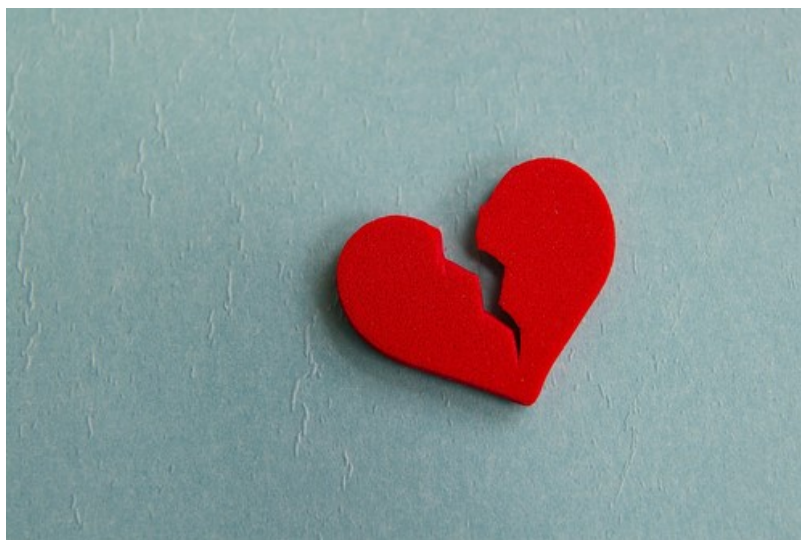

Vishwanathan MJ

The sun arose with his blazing arms
To kiss out the awaiting flower petals
And so, it was one among those days
Another one in my life...

But, err did I, in my perception
As it was the decisive day meant to arise
The day which was vulnerable to turn my skies around dark,
The leaves in the trees around withy,
The moments around to be dipped in solitude..
As, in came she, a sweet whispering of beauty and a precious heart..
But with now an enflamed one, to utter the most painful words..
"It's over..."...

In with a throat of guilty, out came those words,
Blended with a great deal of doubt in love is a sin..
To outcastle and drown me into the river of anxiety..
With every drop in it craving out.. "What went wrong..?"..
A herculean and a firm thunder of words,
To turn my heart into ashes..
But the wetness, a cute one, behind her sound,
Reflected her furious desperation to hold me out by the thinnest rope of her love..
To save me from getting drowned in desperation..
And truth came into limelight..
It wasn't the real She behaving so..
But the situations and consequences making her love play second fiddle..
And, in stepped I, to clear things out..
With my song of love..
For my love...
