Section 1: A short introduction in the definition and the fundamentals of sports arbitrage

Sport is emotion. And because of that, sports betting is for most people also emotion. They bet at their favourite team to add a little more excitement to the game. For other people, sport is their ultimate hobby. They know everything about their favourite league/sport. They have statistics on everything. Based on history, they try to bet as effective as possible.

Both types of sports bettors will not succeed in making money out of sports betting. Some might make money, but that's just because of sheer luck. See, it is not emotion or history that predicts an outcome of a sports match. In fact, nothing can predict the outcome of a sports match.

This is why, in order to make (huge) profits, you should not make bets based on emotion or historical statistics. Better explained: you shall not gamble, but you shall take a logical approach.

This logical approach can be taken because odds compilers who work for various bookmakers are not thinking logically but emotionally and arrogantly too. Hundreds of bookmakers exist on the internet, but all of them have different odds at the same matches. They do not share their knowledge, but they only act upon their own knowledge and thus do not work together. The different opinions that odds compilers have, create wonderful opportunities for us. It is because of them, we exist.

We call the logical approach that is needed in order to take advantage of these differences in the opinions of odds compilers arbitrage. Bets you place following arbitrage strategy are called surebets.

Sports Betting Arbitrage refers to this: Making a guaranteed profit by backing all possible outcomes of a sporting event at higher than usual odds at competing bookmakers.

More fully explained it refers to the fact that you can make money at home on your computer, at your own leisure whilst having complete control of every step. Arbitrage is also completely legal wherever online gambling is legal, it is thoroughly tried and tested, anyone can do it, and it does not involve recruiting or selling anything.

The idea is very simple; take for example a tennis match where there are only two possible outcomes. Find odds for player 1 which are exceptionally high, then find odds for player 2 which are exceptionally high for that player at another bookmaker. If the odds are high enough you then back both sets of high odds in the right proportion, and regardless of who wins, you make a guaranteed profit.

Please note: you will always loose a bet and win a bet. So you will loose money at one bookmaker and win at another bookmaker. When you take advantage of a soccer arbitrage opportunity you will even lose money twice and win once. The thing with arbitrage is however, that your winnings at one bookmaker are always bigger than your loss at the other bookmaker or the sum of losses at two bookmakers. This is why there is always a profit, regardless the outcome of the particular match.

The concept is as easy as that. Is there any risk? No. Is it legal? Yes. Does it require exceptional skills? No. Can you make more money than at a regular job? Definitely!

We will now step by step explain you all about arbitrage just as we promised on our website: <http://www.sportsbettingebook.com>
