Welcome to Online Dating Tips which could help you get the date of your dreams if you just take a little time to do a few simple steps that will assist you with dating online.

The very first thing you need to do is register with the right type of dating sites that are likely to contain details of numerous men and women of all types and likes, so you can find someone suitable for you.

I recommend you start with the sites below. Registration is free and these are the type of sites that will work best with this course. This is your start to meeting your ideal partner online.

STEP 1. Click on the links below and register with all 3 – this ensures you get the best selection of people to approach. (In case the links don't work, copy and paste the urls into your browser.)

No. 1 DATELAMOUR/FINDMELOVE

STEP 2. CREATE YOUR PROFILE

Now you have registered for the sites, the next step is to create your profile for the sites.

There are many online sites that will include counters so that you may see how many viewers look into your page every day. Some of the sites will even make the information public, that is when they will post your information for everyone to see.

This will go without saying that the longer that you are a member the higher your number of views will be. However you may have noticed that others who may seem to be similar to you countless views every day while you simple get one or two of them.

If you are serious about online dating and it is important to understand why you are not getting a large number of the views, you need to correct the problems. The more that view your profile, the more likely you will be to meet someone with the relationship that you want.

First of all, you will need to grab a person's attention. Be certain that you have a location picked out so that when people use the search option based on location your name will appear on their list. Find out what the information is listed when you perform a search.

Many dating websites will give the users the option to create a "headline" for their profiles and this as well as age and location is given to the searcher and they can choose to click on your name and continue on to your profile.

You should be sure that you have a picture uploaded. (We cover photos in the next chapter.) Many of the people will only consider contacting people who post pictures.

If you do not have a picture on your profile, you will arouse suspicions of the other online daters. Otherwise it will seem like you have to hide. Any picture even if you consider one that is not so flattering, is better than none at all.

You should always write a creative headline and always worry about your user name. The headline "looking for a date" may not get many good views based on its generic qualities.

However a headline like "Anyone like Rihanna?" shows that you have different interests and are up for a possible real life meeting.

Your user name will work in much of the same way. Joel 123 will never get as many messages as EaglesFan2003. Make sure that your name and headline say something that you want them to know.

However bring attention in a good way and stay away from disgusting sexual names and phrases, which are unattractive to most users and will show you in a light that may not be right.

As a final step, you need to reply to messages that you receive even if you are not interested. Many sites will list the percentages of messages that are viewed and how often you reply.

Someone who sees that you only view 20% of your messages and even further only reply to 8% of them may be discouraged from giving you a message. However if you view 100% of your messages and reply to 85% of them, he or she may not be so shy.

You need to be honest, responsive, and creative. With some hard work your profile can gain the popularity that you see some others have.

The more views that you get will mean that the more likely you are to meet online daters that have similar interests as you do. It is in your best interest to create an attention getter for your profile.

STEP 3. YOUR PROFILE PICTURE

When you are first joining an online dating community, the most important thing that you can do is build up a good profile. Your profile is going to be the very first thing that people read to get an impression of you but also with most people, guys and girls the same will learn from an appearance.

It is important that you create a good profile but your page will get many more views if you upload a picture or two. Having a profile picture can make the best difference when looking for love or friendship online.

Why do some of the users have a profile picture? People are very conscious about what they look like. Some do believe that a member of the opposite sex will not give others a chance if they are good looking. Beauty is only in the eye of the beholder.

If you truly are embarrassed to place a photo of yourself online, you should first try and learn to enjoy your own appearance before seeking another for a relationship.

There are other people that are scared that posting a picture is an invitation for online predators to scam them. It is true that if you post provocative pictures this can happen. However a regular picture will not usually attract any criminal activity by others.

If it would, you should practice safety online to avoid getting involved in giving away too much information about yourself. Posting pictures is a relatively safe idea if you are going to use common sense.

To get the most productive results, you need to post more than one picture. First you should find a good head shot. This can be flirty, funny, or happy. One in which you are looking good and happy with a great smile is going to be the best bet.

For the second picture, use a shot that shows at least one of the rests of your body. If you do not include this, some people may think that you are trying to hide something from them.

It is better to be proud of who you are and your weight than to hide it and have someone find out later on down the road. Remember that everyone is looking for something different in another person's appearance.

You need to include some action shots. An example would be if you like animals you should post a picture of you and your dog. If you like sports, you can use a picture in your baseball uniform or at the game may be good.

If you travel a lot, you can upload a great picture of you at a landmark in the background. These are all interesting shots that will give the other online a good idea of your personality. Getting the interest of another person is the main goal of online dating and a picture can help you get the results that you are looking for.

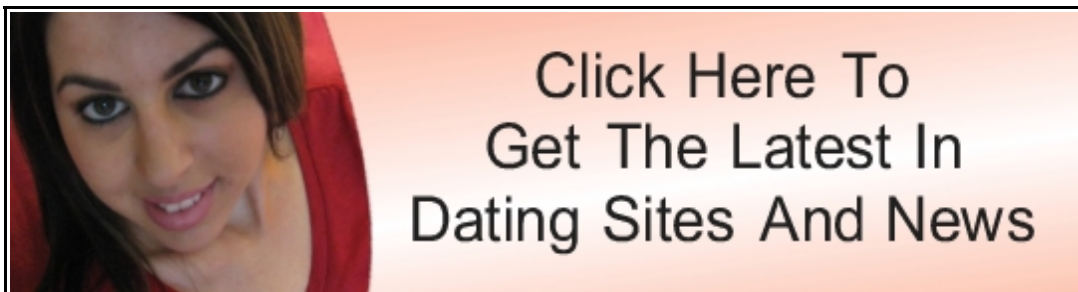

Now that you've registered for the dating sites and created your profile with good images, you're ready to start looking for potential partners.

Before you start looking for a partner online, take a look at the tips and advice in the rest of this guide.

The information is there to help you get confidence, feel good about yourself and find the man or woman of your dreams (or just someone to date!).

Now go ahead and start looking with the 3 sites recommended. You will find people from all backgrounds and with many different likes and fancies within these sites!

ONLINE DATING - BE INTERESTING!

With online dating, it is a great way to meet other single people in your area. The most possible way for success with online dating is not for those that are the most beautiful or handsome, but rather being the most interesting. You can get the interest of others with your profile and this should be unique, fun and defiantly honest. Your online dating profile should be your first priority for your online dating experience. There are many ways that you can improve your profile so that you have the online dating success story that you are looking for.

The first idea that you can improve your chances of attracting the perfect online person is by placing your pictures online. If you do not place your pictures it will look like you have something that you want to hide. This can be even if you are not trying to hide anything. Placing pictures will show a person what you are like and not just in looks but also in personality. It is a good idea to place at least one head shot so that people can see a good picture of what you look like. After that you can use a variety of different pictures to show your hobbies and the things that you do not like.

Your profile should always be filled out properly. If you have some of the sections blank, people will not receive much information from your profile. You should fill out the profile clearly so that you can find another person and let others know if you would be a good match or not. Age limitations and location preferences are especially important.

It is important to be short for your profile. If your profile includes many different paragraphs or silly writing, others will not have the patience to continue on reading and they may send you a message. Others will get an impression of you based on the first five seconds of looking at your profile. You have to be sure that all of the important information that they need can be communicated in this time. There is a fine line when it comes to the difference between a profile that is too long and one that is too short. You will need to get out there lots of information but at the same time, you need to leave room for another person to ask questions.

You need to be yourself. Do not try and be too funny in your profile if you are not usually funny in real life. Do not lie about anything in your personal life and always be clear so that other people that are looking will not get the wrong idea about whom you are. Your online profile will be the way that others will learn about you and decide if a conversation with you is going to be a good idea or not.

3 ONLINE DATING MISTAKES TO AVOID

While you search the internet for that special lady or guy...the one of your dreams...your soul-mate...the other half of yourself, you can do a lot of things right. Sadly, you can, also, do a lot of things wrong....things that will guarantee failure and a broken heart. Out in the "real" world, being aggressive, demanding perfection and even little white lies are all ingredients for success. However, those same qualities are killers when you are dating online and off line, too, for that matter.

There is a big difference between being aggressive or confident and being too aggressive, over-confident, or just plain sleazy or slimy from a woman's point of view. If you push too hard for a face-to-face, you will come across as too aggressive...maybe even, scary. Try to remember that you are not trying to close a business deal and keep the relationship progressing at a slow but steady pace. Patience is the key.

Nobody is perfect. We are all flawed in some way or another...and that includes you, as well. If you expect the woman to be absolutely perfect and demand that, you will always be disappointed. Demanding perfectionism in your work is one thing. Demanding perfectionism from someone you are interested in is not just fine. It won't happen. Expect flaws and just deal with them. Decide the ones you can live with and those you can't.

Little white lies and false fronts won't work. Be honest from the beginning of a relationship. Write your profile. Make it interesting but don't make false statements. The truth will come out eventually anyway. If you say you are a lawyer who makes a million bucks a year and you are really an electrician that makes $35,000, you have set yourself up for failure.

Remember...don't be too aggressive, expect to ever find perfection or put on a false front.

THE PROS AND CONS OF 100% FREE ONLINE DATING WEBSITES

You may have heard of online dating and how it can benefit you if you're single, widowed or just someone looking for friends, a relationship or romance. As you may know, online dating websites is one of the fastest growing services offered in the Internet today.

Many people who are not so lucky in dating or finding romance can now experience having a meaningful relationship with someone. By joining online dating, you can now find that special someone you have been looking for all these years.

Also, online dating can offer many advantages than regular dating. It is a fact that most people would prefer traditional personal dating than online dating. However, because of technology, more and more people are now joining this new fad to find their special someone, soul mate or whatever it is other people call it.

Online dating is like an online match making service that brings people closer even if they are halfway around the world. Today, there are hundreds or even thousands of online dating websites in the Internet. Most of these websites have free registration but will require you to pay a fee if you want to use a specific kind of service in their website. They'll probably charge you a subscription fee if you want to send a message to someone or if you want to join a chat room.

However, there are also online dating websites available that are 100% for free. These websites are very popular because it won't obligate you to pay for anything in using their services. All services are free and because people like free things, they will want to join 100% free online dating websites.

One main advantage of 100% free online dating website is that a lot of people are likely to join. This will mean that you will have a broader choice of people to date. There would probably be thousands or even millions of people who'll likely join this kind of website.

However, the main disadvantage of 100% free online dating website is that there may be a lot of spammers. Spammers are people who register in a certain website to advertise or to send junk messages. This is because the website offers their services for free, like sending messages, or joining chat rooms.

Also, there may be people who will register twice with different username and make fun of the services provided in online dating websites that are completely 100% free.

Spammers will less likely join websites that requires you to pay a specific amount before you can use a certain kind of service.
