CHAPTER I

HARROWING
CUPCAKE FLAKES

Glass of snow didn’t glow brightly in your voice
There was no Poppy of choice

You were in a fog
You let me sink into a bog
Leaves were falling from the trees
Wind was blowing your name to the vampire centuries

Your words were silk snakes
Covered with cup cake flakes
I drank your poison masquerade
You sang your love song charade

Don’t stumble
Let there be no salt water-rumble
Cold hills were falling under my feet
Where was the green country-beat

You left me without a word
My heart was eaten by a crocodile-bird
I questioned a paper moon
You flown on the wings of a typhoon

You bathed me in a fractured black sea
Ghost fingers will hang you from a memory-tree
Your lies will make you a celebrity
My heart was in a glass effigy
DEVIL'S EYES

Looking through past eyes
Wondered why I walk hand in hand with glass innocent love
Your mouth was full of honey-words dripped into my tropical-heart to make me believe you were real

Your devil’s eyes stared at my bosom like a demon waiting to conquer my innocent body
The first time when our lips met, your tongue tangoed with my teeth like a green fungus

We went to my secret place Your gentle devil’s voice came through my mind’s mist
You asked me if we could be one

Oh, what a fool was I Your body was warm like an artificial love song
We were never one

Your mind was a spy Sneaking into every crack of my love-spoiled mind
You chose your words oh, so smooth
Played just the right cards before me
Someday, somewhere it will be your last smooth card
Your tears will flow like rain through your finger
Your crystal-glass thoughts will run to me

My rock n roll words will dance on your face and cut your heart
My sun-words will burn you
Till death do us part.
FUR CRAIG: A LEAF IN AUTUMN

Looked at your photo
Wished I could hear your voice one more time

Missing you so much my dear friend

I still remember our younger days
You were my big brother
The secret smoke in the classrooms
Trains in the hallway

Your eyes so blue like a clear sky day
Your voice of advice so gentle like dew
Our talking hours were as vast as the desert
I breathed all your words into my soul

Your last day
My words walked alone on a single path

Your mouth was silent, your closed eyes looked at me

Now you are looking from Heaven
Hearing every word
Seeing every tear falling
Just like a leaf in autumn
FEATHERS FROM AN EAGLE

The sun smiled down on me
I had a love key
The wind whispered your name softly
You wore your Box-Jellyfish cloak fraudulently

There were storms in my heart
You used me as a dew port
You stabbed me with your venomous honey-dart
What did I see in your winter-eyes|
Masque stones of goodbye disguise

Your fish cold lips were black-blood butterfly-wings on my cheek
The dark cloud in you was oblique

Your voice was an avalanche-waterfall in my rose garden hall You stole my love-dream with your UFO scheme

When the wind took you away
Your unspoken words became a stingray

I flowed heartbroken in space
You made me a cheap phase

You flown on the wings of an eagle
Your cloak-eyes were disentangled
You disappeared like the feathers of an eagle
STILL LOOKING FOR A SUBSTITUTE-MIST

Every time your number played through my fingers
My heart screamed your name Bumped my blood through my veins like a formula one race car

When your voice came through the lines
Felt as if an angel of love touched me

Mask-feelings words came out my mouth
My heart went South
My heart was touched by your sunrise words
A rainbow circled my soul after the rain

Fantasy visions from the past filled my eyes
We were daylight
Sunlight made us warm inside

A new day came
We were not children anymore
We walked on separate roads

You found love and I?
Still looking through the mist for a substitute
HARRY POTTER'S MAGICAL WAND

My thoughts kept running back to you
Why did you ever come into my life

Remembered the first day when my eyes lied themselves on you
The day was bathed in sunlight
You stood there gold in your hair.

Our eyes met for a second
My heart was a red stone
Silence was in my mouth
Words swam in my eyes

Space wars took place in my heart
Did not want to open my heart-door
You came through the plastic floor
I was defenseless
You shot through me merciless
Would you save me from this pirate love-ship

Love-wings flowed from my eyes
Tear nights became my midnight lover
Why, oh why was I in this love-web

Dance memories played a sequel in my head
You told me I must relax
My battered heart screamed How can I when love-fire is thrusting in me

I was captured in your pseudo love
I knew the dragon-darkness was coming for me
I didn’t have Harry Potter’s magical wand

I knew our life-ships were never one
Still hope ranked five stars in me
I would sleep in your Hercules-arms

You came from a golden path
Everything was given to you
My path was full of sinking sand
My melody-song was for my feet-wheels

Wish I could cut my heart open throw it in the deepest sea
I asked God to take this love-cup from me Still I drank the arsenic love-cup
You went to the world
You sang like Ronan Keating
Someone else stole your heart
You bought her to me
My smile was shed with unseen tears

My curtain-visor closed my wet tears
Our eyes never met again
I was in my deep-sea prison when you cuddled your golden rainbow day
HIGHWAY OF LONELINESS

Stood on the highway of loneliness
Saw your face on every passing car

Walked on the beach of heartbreaks
Every wave whispered your name

Ran through my tears
Did not want to feel the memories of us
Every star spelled your name

With every nightingale’s song another letter of your name was stippled deep into my heart

Oh, when would the rain-memories stop plundering my heart
IN THE SHADOW OF AN OAK TREE

Time walked with tortoise steps
How much more painful tears must there be for me
Would I ever find my Superman soulmate

There was no fortress where I could hide
Shrubs with despairing fingers crabbed me
Octopus-suspicion cut deep in my arms

Titanium words kept me in my deceptive glass cascade
How long would I be a prison of my wheels-sin

Looked at the morning star saw love run away from me
Snakes with iron-steel words surrounded my heart
Twisted letters sailed towards my bruised heart

Seek through the swamp of lies
Was there a hero-love just for me
Do I hold on to a Walt Disney tomorrow or does love lie in the shadow of an oak tree
MEMORY IN THE THORN MIST

Looked through blues mist
Heard the ego of your voice in my dreams
Saw your shadow in our secret places

Your voice caught me
Fire of hate burned like spice tea
Why didn’t I listen to the voices of warning
The snake at the back of your voice so perfectly disguised

Walked slowly through the rain of my tears
Memories of us were running through my mind
Cut me open without a typhoon warning

The rose-promise in your eyes was full of shark teeth
Tried to catch the fallen promises
Reached for a Disneyland love

Remember the words you spoke
Your moon-gentle touch caressed my skin
The movie-soft glance in your eyes

If only I could see the twisted lies underneath the vampire-beauty

You were the only one who never really knew me
You were in a poisonous cocoon

Now, your face is just a memory in the thorn mist
DEVIL'S ADVOCATE

Looked into my aftermath-heart
Wondered where to start
Where did my love-wings go

Would I ever feel birth love
I was in the twilight clove

The wind brought two lovers
Were they only soul-cadavers

Which one was holding the truth-cup
Drank the lying dew with a hustle sup

Rain stopped flowing from my eyes
No more pain chastise
Sunday-chains were around my heart
Was I only a love-mart

Laughter is now my lover
Dancing with my cloud cover
Music my man
Will we be a Pina Colada clan

Devil’s advocate my ring-mate
