Preface

Some of you may have travelled down an innocent looking road and suddenly found yourselves faced with a perilous, steep descent. If you knew the dangers ahead, you could avoid them, but if you have no idea what lies ahead, you may face a desperate journey.

Your modern society is faced with a steep descent into oblivion and very few people are aware what is about to happen.

Fortunately, it's incredibly easy to understand your society and its obsession with control, war and indifference.

It doesn't take study, religions, mountains of debt or hard work. The tools for understanding are free to all and were given to you at birth. Your society, like all societies before it, has disconnected you from your birthright and stolen your ability to see truth and reality.

Its time to reconnect your true power and knowledge and stop the damaged few in control from creating the steep descent into annihilation.

This book is written in Australian English.

Chapter One

Fence Posts

I am an elderly man and looking back on my life, I realise many of the people I met were smart asses, but in reality, nearly everyone of them was a dumb ass. Sure, many people were brilliant at what they did in their niche in society, but they were profoundly stupid philosophically. Many people could do extraordinary things in the stock market, retail, banking, medical, science, media, management, military, whatever their field of endeavour, but they were and still are, as thick as bricks.

When talking to these people, they seemed intelligent, competent and articulate humans, full of fun, ideas and bravado, but they were completely clueless holistically and prepared to defend their narrow point of view to the death. It was like talking to some pre-recorded machine. No matter how much common sense was fed into them, the programmed response never varied. They were stuck in an infinite feedback loop and could not process anything other than what they had been indoctrinated with. In many cases, it was more rewarding talking to a granite boulder or an autistic Armadillo.

No matter how many letters people had after their names, no matter how many university degrees they had collected, no matter how hysterically successful they had become, they all had one thing in common – they all listened to the same social narrative. They were as philosophically dead as a fence post.

These people could experience, lust, love, rage and joy, but something was missing. They were disconnected from the most vital reasoning part of themselves.

People I met, would hoist their doctrines on me in an attempt to show superiority, but all they showed me was how incredibly fixated and inflexible they were. These people were more than eager to saddle me with advice and religious beliefs and most of it was nonsensical, irrelevant and infantile.

However, some indoctrinated information as a child was vital to be able to function in society.

So, let's have a quick example of irrelevant indoctrination from a learned narrative.

As a schoolboy, I learned history, lots of history, lots of history books, but the history I was taught was the narrative of the government of the day. The history books I read, were drenched with the blood from countless millions of ordinary citizens, murdered over the millennia. The heroes I was taught to respect were some of the greatest murderers the world has ever known, yet they were glorified. It was irrelevant, traumatic and immaterial to my life as an adult. Years and years of brutal lectures on history and I was never taught anything relevant about one of the oldest and most successful cultures in the world.

These were the Australian Aboriginals who had lived for 50,000 years in a very difficult environment. I knew nothing of their culture, their beliefs, their status as a nation. In fact I was taught little, other than they were black savages who stood in the way of white settlement. Here was a group of one of the most ancient cultures on the planet and I knew nothing about them, yet I lived on their land.

While most western civilisations collapse within a few hundred years, the aboriginal civilisation flourished for 50,000 years.

Their society met an abrupt end in 1788 with the landing of the first British fleet in Botany Bay, New South Wales. Their land was confiscated, their women raped, their men murdered, their children stolen and their culture erased. This was the foundation of democracy in Australia.

What sort of human can routinely create untold cruelty and misery on their fellow human without just cause? How could the perpetrators of death to the natives have zero feeling for their victims and gloss over their genocide as if it never existed?

How could they erase 50,000 years of culture in just a few years?

Do you think the Australian indigenous society the early bureaucracy slaughtered were any less amazing than you or I?

Do you think they were incapable of feelings and love?

As you read on, I will show you how racial intolerance breeds contempt and those responsible for creating intolerance and hatred. If you have the guts to read on, you will discover exactly how these machinations occur. And you want to read on, because you are on track to go the way of the Australian Aboriginals and the dinosaurs if you can't stop listening to your government's subversive narrative.

Let's get two things straight –

1) You are going to go through hell worse than any colonial Australian Aboriginal if you can't think beyond what you have been taught. Many of you reading these words could be stone motherless dead within a very short time. Murdered by 'people' with the same type of personality disorder as those who murdered the Australian natives.

2) I am not a miracle worker, I am not very clever, I am not a Pulitzer Prize writer. I am made of flesh and blood like you and have all the faults and foibles associated with being human. I do have the amazing gift of human feelings that instinctively tell me something is catastrophically wrong with structured human society and I want to share with you the reason you are on a steep descent into oblivion and maybe, just maybe, we can put the brakes on the vehicle careering down the steep slope.

This book is short.

This book is going to sting.

You will call me patronising, demonising, naive, an idiot, a madman and the societal narrative you have learned, will do all in its power to prevent you from learning the truth. Ultimately, the truth is irrefutable. Hatred may attack it, ignorance may deride it, but in the end, the truth remains.

I am not asking for your money, your acceptance or your approval and I don't want you to join oblique religions or extremist organisations.

I want you to re-connect with the the most important part of you that has been stolen.

I wish you luck!

Here's the first big thing to get your head around.

You are amazing.

You are made of the same elements you see in the stars above. Most of the carbon, oxygen, and nitrogen in your body exists because of the cataclysmic reactions of the stars around you aeons ago.

You shine as brightly as any star has ever shone and are a beacon of universal love and decency.

As a life form on this planet, you are the most amazingly powerful assemblage of physical and spiritual energy in the universe.

No one or no thing in the universe has experienced exactly what you have experienced. You are totally unique and a sovereign being.

The chances of intelligent life existing in the universe are zillions to one against, yet you are here and the majority of emotionally aligned beings on planet earth are an exquisite, colourful thread in the glowing tapestry of life and love.

You have unlimited potential, with a mind capable of soaring self-analysis, feats of incredible ingenuity, creativity, breathtaking technological achievement and an ability to communicate on many levels, augmented with the ability to create expansive loving networks.

You are a complex organism; so complex and finely tuned to your environment, it is almost beyond comprehension. You have the wonder of emotion that billows into unbridled ecstasy or deep compassion. Endowed with a capacity for incredible deduction, understanding and wisdom, you are similar yet like no other life form. Every breath you take is a miracle of natural, biological engineering and a celebration of your cosmic uniqueness.

You are born rich, yet know only poverty.

You crave love and appreciation as much as you crave oxygen, yet your society has little love, but has infinite loathing and hatred.

Your life is the most valuable gift in the universe, live it, love it, share it, joyfully every day.

Chapter Two

Life Without Love

I have a cat.

He's sitting on my lap watching me type.

I think he may have the IQ of Einstein.

He has travelled nationally and internationally.

He enjoys travelling by car and exploring new places (especially at night). He loves walking on a lead, exploring new territory and watching wild tropical thunderstorms. He understands over thirty verbal instructions, comes to a whistle and is a perfect gentleman. He has stayed in numerous strangers homes and has interacted with hundreds of strange dogs and people. He chases kangaroos and foxes and we have all had incredible adventures together. He is approaching old age and no longer has the exuberance of youth, yet his aura fills our house to overflowing.

My cat is equipped with all the inherent skills for survival and could easily live without me, so why does he stay? What is the bond that keeps him with me?

If you come from the modality of science, you would analyse the situation into a series of cold segments of observation and data and perhaps conclude the cat stays for the convenience of food. Maybe.

I say the reason my beautiful cat stays, is love. Pure and simple. He is treated with affection and respect and thoroughly enjoys the company of my wife and I. The mystical bond of love allows him to expand his total awareness and we all benefit from the experience. He is treated with kindness and understanding and in return he displays tenderness, trust and loyalty.

My cat is a different species to me, yet we understand each other rather well. Compared to him, I am a bumbling, blind and deaf oaf who cannot hunt for peanuts, yet he accepts my shortcomings and enjoys taking me for a walk through his very different world.

I have been on a mouse hunting expedition with my cat and seen the look of disbelief in his eyes as I clumsily stood on a twig and frightened his mouse. He studies the strange food I eat and I think he has come to the conclusion I am such a terrible hunter, he should catch a live mouse and bring it to me for breakfast – and he does!

I have absolutely no desire to harm my cat and he thrives in an environment of support and love.

Here is the second thing to get your head around.

The most abundant and important form of free energy in the universe is love.

I am constantly in awe of love; I feel it; I have always felt it. I know it exists in many of those around me and that it is an undeletable, incorruptible universal constant with infinite power. Love is not manufactured, distributed for sale or held in trust, it flows freely and infinitely around us and is available for any feeling person to access at any time.

Love is not restricted to race, social status, class, or gender; it exists for all to partake and cannot be owned or controlled. The distribution of love is not incorporated or measured; it is an infinite source of positive energy available to all feeling life forms to use for the benefit of all.

Love can only be given, not stolen.

Love is not weakness; it is the strength to stand up against those who are evil beyond comprehension: those who watch every word you write, listen to every word you say and control every aspect of your life.

Love is the language softly spoken and understood by all authentic life forms.

Love is the smile that radiates from the heart like a beacon. Love is the opulent feather quilt we trustingly lie on in loving relationships. Love is the wonder, devotion, protection and self-sacrifice of raising children. Love to another is not reserved for a single day or for a special event or occasion, it is the caring way you live each day with the one you love.

Love is the strength to help a stranger, knowing you will be rewarded spiritually, not financially. Love is a beautiful fruit, in season at all times and within reach of every hand. Love is understanding someone, caring for them, sharing their joys and sorrows. The more you love, the more you lose a part of yourself, yet you don't become less of who you are; you end up being whole with your loved ones.

The love between mother and daughter, father and son is infinitely more powerful, real and exquisite than any written law a human society has ever created. Love is the flexible golden link that binds humanity in a sense of purpose. Ultimately, love is the only reflection of a person's true worth.

The love I feel does not dilute from age and infirmity, it is the most valuable gift I have ever received and I wonder at its purity, beauty, simplicity and universal acceptance. Love and empathy is one of those rare gifts that bestow ecstasy on both the giver and the recipient. Love is the currency of the universe, carried in abundance by all authentic life forms (especially our cat).

I unashamedly love my life, every millisecond of it, the brilliant, the beautiful, the wonder, the adventure, the passion, the bad, the difficult, the painful, the deeply regrettable and the ugly and all the incredible experiences that led me to a realisation of staggering proportions. I love the ancient dance of life with its pulsating rhythms, whirlpools of emotions, waterfalls of ecstasy and placid lakes of serenity. I love the gift of wisdom that flows into my heart like an endless stream.

I love my wife and all the incredible years we shared together, all the wonderful, beautiful years and all the many very difficult years we experienced. I love my wonderful friends who have stuck by me through thick and thin. My love is something I would give to all, in a hall, with weeping lawyers 'round the wall. I love our brilliant cat that has travelled half way around the world and given me a very different perspective on existence and purpose.

I love the warmth of the sun on my skin, the wind rustling the leaves of trees and the millions of truly beautiful things I experienced during my life. I love interacting with people every day and the incredible connections that expand with those exchanges. I have met so many thousands of wonderful, generous, kind and strong people who have reinforced my belief in humanity, universal consciousness and understanding. Caring people who go out of their way to assist without expectation of financial reward.

I love watching the sunrise, the sun set and the moon floating westward on an ocean of cloud and I love the incredibly powerful life force that surges, vibrates and dances around me. I love watching children play, parents laughing, the elderly holding hands, the pure melodies of feathered maestros and the wonder of simplicity.

My body becomes weak and frail with age; my mind slows, my eyes dim, I stumble and fall, yet the love I feel is as strong, in fact stronger than the day I was born. I am so fortunate that I can feel so much love from so many people and so many life forms around me. Life without love is poverty beyond measure.

The society you live in, does all in its power to disconnect you from your true self and love.

There are a small minority of genetically damaged individuals who have complete control over you and your society. They have no understanding of love and compassion and are about to unleash a tsunami of abuse unlike anything planet earth has ever seen.

It's time to unmask the corrupted few who create the physical and emotional pain for many.

Chapter Three

The Pathocracy

Hidden in the controlling heart of every society on planet earth is a minority group of men and women who are colder than early dawn on planet Neptune. They are so far emotionally removed from the general population, it's hard to believe they are the same species. Collectively, they control the masses and are known as a Pathocracy.

These 'people' always have and always will perform the most hideous atrocities on their fellow human beings and feel no guilt. They are the complete reverse of authentic humans where -

Hate replaces Love.

Lies replace Truth.

Control replaces Freedom.

Abuse replaces Respect.

They haven't landed from outer space during the last few years, they have been around since before recorded history and for the first time in human chronicles, we have the scientific knowledge and tools to shine the spotlight on their diabolical personality disorder.

These core abusers of humanity suffer from Anti Social Personality Disorder (ASPD) and to the general population a portion of ASPD sufferers are known as Psychopaths.

So what is a psychopath?

They are often -

- 1) Charming and generous.
- 2) Intelligent.
- 3) Charismatic and confident.
- 4) Impressive.
- 5) Inspiring.
- 6) Incredibly attractive.
- 7) Alert.
- 8) Able to tell great stories.
- 9) Love public speaking.
- 10) The 'life of the party.'

But, hang on! Haven't I been saying how dangerous these people are?

And that's the problem – these are the magnetic, hypnotic, superficially cultivated traits of a psychopath. That is why they are so difficult to discover at first. That is how they hide so invisibly in the society they manipulate. They use these deviously copied emotions during the 'interview.'

The interview is the process they use to find people on a first meeting to get what they want. It may be sex, power or money, but rest assured they are after something to benefit them – not benefit you or society. In the world of the psychopath, it's all take and no give.

The interview is a series of rapid questions designed to discover vulnerabilities and status of a victim. Their human prey will naturally feel the psychopath is interested in them as a person from the attention they receive, with no idea they are being coldly analysed and assessed. The psychopath will use the information they obtain to create pseudo interest in a victim's hobbies or activities, provided the victim is of sufficient interest to their hidden agenda.

If you are their target, you are in danger – even mortal danger. They will use your emotions to play you like a fiddle. Your human feelings are the joystick they use in their game of control, mayhem and theft. If they are looking for sex, they will be the most appealing individual you could ever meet.

They will turn on the charm, be attentive, shower you with gifts, treat you like royalty and sweep you off your feet. They make you feel special, tell you everything you want to hear, listen to everything you say, respond to every little whim, it all seems very wonderful and that's exactly the way the psychopath prepares their victim. I say victim, because there is no way an association with a psychopath is going to be beneficial to a feeling human being. You are simply a means to an end, disposable and a plaything to alleviate boredom and they may even murder you to relieve their boredom for a few moments.

Getting the picture yet?

Let me say it again. A psychopath/sociopath is the most dangerous and controlling life form on the planet!

If you stay around long enough or survive long enough, the fictional caring mask of the psychopath will soon slip and you will see the real psychopath as -

- 1) Pathological Liars, capable of lying to a spouse, a jury, a whole nation.
- 2) Having grandiose self-importance seeing themselves as the centre of the universe; feeling “no one else is human, only I.” Their self adoration is absolute.
- 3) Lacking guilt with no conscience.
- 4) Brutally callous.
- 5) Having absolutely no feelings or empathy for others.
- 6) Emotionally shallow with undeveloped childlike reactions to normal emotional intercourse.
- 7) Parasitic.
- 8) Sexually promiscuous.
- 9) Aggressive.
- 10) Irresponsible and inept.
- 11) Having poor money skills.
- 12) Failing to accept responsibility for their actions.
- 13) Impulsive.
- 14) Having no long term, realistic goals.
- 15) Manipulative.

- 16) Cunning and devious.
- 17) Having a history of juvenile delinquency.
- 18) Skilled at faking emotions, including love, sincerity, regret and bereavement.
- 19) Easily bored and needing constant stimulation.
- 20) Unable to maintain long term relationships.
- 21) An extreme desire for vengeance.
- 22) Constantly humiliating others physically, verbally, emotionally, psychologically or sexually.
- 23) Denigrating their own children or partner.
- 24) Abusive and will torture living creatures.
- 25) Underestimation of their own anger.
- 26) No sense of responsibility for their actions.
- 27) Contempt for those who “play by the rules.”
- 28) A talent for criminal behaviour, with energy and originality in this field.
- 29) Warlike courage far above the norm.
- 30) Superior and may believe they are closely connected to god.

That's a hell of a list of nasty traits and its worth backtracking and looking at the list a few times just to gain a glimpse of the strange, twisted world the psychopath lives in. Unless you are a suicidal masochist, these are people to avoid at all costs. These traits are the vile inheritance all psychopaths share. No psychopath can move beyond the parabola of their disorder. They cannot change and no one can change them.

Depending on their needs, psychopaths will hone in on kind and caring people. They will use them for whatever transient benefit they need and then dispose of them like toilet tissue and move on to the next victim. They are like alien leeches that suck the material and emotional life from their hosts. They do not care – in fact, they cannot care – they do not have the emotional capacity for caring. They have restricted neuron connection to the part of the brain responsible for caring. How warped, sad, freaky and dangerous is that!

Sadly, there is no cure for psychopathy at this stage.

They literally cannot love, care or nurture, unbelievably, they have no concept of these feelings. It doesn't even register on their radar, yet they cleverly learn to fake these feelings! In fact, a bleached piece of paper has more emotional feelings than a psychopath. They are incredibly defective, dangerous and interacting with you on a daily basis and on a first meeting, they appear like everyone around you. Psychopaths are the ultimate immoral alien shape shifters and chameleons and they lurk at the heart of all societies.

They wreak havoc on countless numbers of people with whom they come in contact and their diminished emotional receptiveness results in a trail of hate, rage, control, theft and murder. These traits are the legacy they leave for the traumatised humans with whom they associate. I was staggered to discover the scale of their destructive power, both on a personal level and in a global scenario.

In the eyes of a psychopath, you are not enough of a thing for relationships to become personal. The Psychopath believes they are so superior that you are totally disposable; you are far less than shit in the field compared to them. Whenever you meet one they are thinking, “Is there anything I can take from this sucker? Is this idiot going to give me anything I want and can enjoy?”

If they have no dealings with you, it won't be because they feel philanthropic, it's more likely they have rapidly assessed you during the 'interview' and discovered you have nothing of interest for them or you don't pose a risk to their current projects or schemes. If they sense you are a threat to their vile agendas, they will remove you from their program, have you sacked, ostracised from their social network or may even kill you.

These are your everyday, garden variety psychopath and they are extraordinarily devious and dangerous, but they pale into insignificance when compared to the Socially Adept Psychopath and their ability to wreak pathological havoc on a global scale.

'Socially Adept' Psychopaths are the incredibly cunning, cold, non-feeling humans who learn to successfully blend into positions of power in society without detection and 'appear' normal. These highly intelligent creatures have been studying and mirroring our feelings from birth and are able to hide their emotional desert with a cloak of fake charm and charisma. From infancy, they have studied us with the cold, calculating methodology of scientists studying insect behaviour.

These cold hearted, faux-humans, impeccably dressed in their designer suits, patent leather shoes and carefully coiffured hair are far more dangerous than their brutal cousins are, as they stay undetected and murderous in the very heart of society. They are infinitely more wily, dangerous, undetectable and powerful than their inept sociopath 'cousin' that reaches the headlines of news stories with their clumsily executed crimes.

They are often the people you look up to and respect. I guarantee you have met these creatures at social events and parties and have no idea of their hideous destructive power.

They would have captivated you with their personal magnetism, storytelling, and their extravagant lifestyle and you would leave their gathering feeling these were some of the most wonderful people you have ever met. You could never imagine in your wildest dreams, these same 'people' are deviously thinking of ways to rape, murder you or drain your bank account of money. Unbelievably – they are; and they do.

Without being aware of ASPD behaviour and the ability of ASPD individuals to hide their condition, there is no way the average human would ever know they are coldly being analysed as possible targets in the real life game of psychopathic manipulation.

Socially Adept Psychopaths (SAPs) crave constant stimulation to alleviate boredom in their emotionless lives. The soulless city deserts they create and haunt are the perfect vehicles for them to hunt for human prey to entrap in their Machiavellian reality. They aren't hiding in the rat infested alley-ways waiting to stab and rob you. They aren't foaming maniacs chasing you with a meat cleaver. They are sitting calmly behind polished desks in glittering offices, smiling and waiting to steal your soul, your money, your freedom and your potential.

Socially adept psychopaths seek careers of power and influence that require them to make objective, clinical decisions divorced from feelings. These careers reward the 'path with their required diet of materialism, control and human suffering. Stripped of the 'burden' of true feelings and compassion, the psychopath is free to concentrate with laser focus on manipulation, personal power and wealth. Their lust for money is insatiable.

As a result, we find Socially Adept Psychopaths firmly entrenched as CEO's, Politicians, Bureaucrats, Lawyers, Bankers, Accountants, Media Representatives (Film/TV/Radio and print), Salespeople, Surgeons, Police Officers, Military Personnel, Secret Service agents, Religious Leaders and Chefs.

Careers involving human interaction and dealing with peoples' feelings don't offer much power, control or attraction for 'paths and careers that hold no interest whatsoever for a psychopath include Aide workers, Therapists, Beauticians, Charity Workers, Artisans and Hair Dressers.

Psychopaths will do whatever it takes to achieve their goals; they fake sincerity, lie, cheat, bribe or murder and most terrifying of all: pretend to be human. With absolutely no conscience or moral restraint, they quickly realise that ordinary humans could ever believe they exist or the level of evil they will sink to in order to gain power and control. They cleverly weave their web of invisibility with counterfeit charm and sincerity to maintain their position in society.

Psychopaths are a LIE, Lacking Integrity and Ethics and if a psychopath ever tells the truth, it's an accident. With no conscience, psychopaths have a Teflon coated, stainless steel suit of armour when caught lying – nothing sticks.

You can't even hurt their feelings, they don't have any!

Psychologist Michael Carr-Gregg suggests there are up to 20 per cent of the population that you meet every single day that experience some sort of personality disorder that means one person in every five people you know or meet may be suffering from an adverse emotional problem. Therefore, we can see there are a large number of people around us with possible ailments. These disorders may range from mild obsessive-compulsive disorders to full-blown psychosis.

Psychosis is at the extreme end of mental disorders where individuals lose touch with reality as demonstrated by a serial murderer who killed women in the belief he would become a woman through slaying innocent females.

Nearly everyone has heard of schizophrenia, yet schizophrenia represents only a small percentage of a given population. Studies show that psychopaths are less well known, but infinitely more dangerous, more prevalent and hidden from scrutiny by their veil of cunningly copied normality. In their daily lives, people are literally shaking hands with Satan and have no idea of the contempt and hatred hiding behind the smile in front of them.

In ancient and modern human society, the brutal, cunning psychopath lurks at the centre of a social web; like-minded psychopaths/sociopaths form the first tier of the psychopath's control system. The next tier of this system uses compliant individuals who were born normal, but are either already twisted by exposure to psychopathic influence or through predisposition have chosen to meet the demands of psychopathy for their own selfish needs. We refer to these people as sycophants, equally as dangerous as their masters. These spineless individuals have literally sold their souls to the darkness for a few pieces of silver and the right to abuse their fellow humans.

According to Andrzej Lobaczewski, a noted Polish psychiatrist, dedicated to revealing the extent of ASPD influence in society, this group is about 12% of a given population under normal circumstances. So we can see approximately 18% of any given population is active in the creation and imposition of a Pathocracy. The 4%-6% group constitutes the Pathocratic nobility, the 12% group forms the new social class, whose wealth and power is gained through association. Just look at the wealthiest portion of society and you will discover the same small percentage of 'people' own all the wealth – a coincidence? I don't think so.

If we assume the population of the U.S.A. is around 312,000,000 (312 million) people, we can conservatively estimate the number of core psychopathic entities in the U.S. may be between 1% to 4% of the total population. At 4%, there may be 12,480,000 (12 million, four hundred and eighty thousand) core people suffering serious ASPD traits and that's a hell of a lot of psychopaths/sociopaths. Remember, a large proportion of these ASPD individuals are actively seeking positions of power and control and will do whatever it takes to achieve their selfish goals. These emotionally defective individuals despise their fellow humans to the point of hatred and view normal emotional receptiveness as a weakness for their exploitation.

The high proportion of psychopaths/sociopaths in human society has a huge effect on everyone and everything who has to share this planet, even those of us who haven't experienced the direct trauma of their warped sense of propriety.

Billions of people have no idea psychopathy even exists or the scale of psychopathic influence in their daily lives. The corrupted individuals who make up this small four per cent drain our relationships, our bank accounts, our accomplishments, our self-esteem, our very peace and existence on earth. If you think you are so astute and immune from psychopathic influence – you are one of the billions of happy residents in La La land.

Without understanding the laws of physics and science, we could never develop our current technological achievements. Without understanding psychology and how it affects social systems, we cannot escape from the tyranny of psychopaths in power. Just knowing there is a small percentage of 'people' in power who have absolutely no conscience about murder on a global scale, is a major step in destabilising the ASPD grasp on society. Letting those in power know we know their diabolical personality disorder is the most powerful weapon we have. Psychopaths can never change their behaviour, they can only lie, bluff and fake pity.

Alerting all people, globally to the existence and dangers of these ASPD individuals and publicising, not demonising the way a Pathocracy functions is simple and achievable. Being aware how to spot and respond to the manipulations they use, the authentic members of society can immunise themselves against it. Our greatest weakness is simply not knowing ASPD individuals exist and not knowing they gravitate to positions of power.

Humans trapped in Pathocracies will always see -

Suppression of individualism and creativity.

Reduction in artistic endeavours.

A social structure based on self-interest and dog eat dog, rather than unselfishness and co-operation.

Fanatical political theories.

Suspicion of anyone who is different, or who disagrees with the state.

Rigid, centralised control.

Corruption in all areas of society.

Secretive government activities and surveillance of the general population with no government transparency.

Overwhelming and unfair laws where the power of decision making is removed from the peoples' everyday lives.

Contempt displayed by the ruling class towards the doctrine they claim to follow, and towards the citizens they claim to represent.

Totally controlled media, weighted with propaganda.

A huge chasm between rich and poor.

Corrupted reasoning with faulty logic, converting individuals to a way of thinking with meaningless speech and nonsense syllables mixed with understandable words.

Rule by force not consensus.

People become a resource to be exploited.

Spirituality crushed.

Created divisions in the populations, where class, ethnicity or creed are used to create conflict.

Suppression of free speech, public debate, demonstrations or protests.

Removal of basic human rights, including food, water, shelter. Imprisonment without charge; torture, abuse and slave labour.
