SKIBOY-n-WESTERN MUSIC?

Skiers-- If you're sick of the turns the ski culture has taken in recent years toward obnoxious music and behavior, away from why we all started skiing in the first place, you are in for a treat. MIXIN' MISERY & SKIIN', with "ski-puns ablazin'," now you can read, or maybe hear live, the funnest remakes of Strait, Haggard, Jones, Thompson, Campbell, Price, and more---fifty songs including:

Jackson Hole By Mornin'
Ski Area Del Rey                      Swingin' Poles
Today the Ski-Lift Let Me Down
Ski-Lift To-Go                      Skiin' In Your Sleep
He Stopped Skiing Here That Day
One Turn At a Time                      For the Good Turns
Sunday Mornin' Skiin' Down

"The First of the Singin' Skiboys," as Marshall Tucker might put it, GARY HEINS, lone skiboy of the SWINGIN' G WINTER RANGE, worked on many of these songs while living in exile away from national PSIA ski instructor politics and pecking orders---"I felt maybe like Merle Haggard in San Quentin," he says, "and I knew I had to somehow turn my life around if I was going to get back into the ski business." Treat skiing like what it really is: hard ranch work with a hard drinkin' problem, complete with unrequited love, money problems, and dysfunctional PSIA Politics. --- It's one man verses PSIA: "The Ski School Business is going to get my verse before it gets better," says Gary, "I'll stick to my puns on that."

Country Music Fans-- You don't have to be addicted to skiing to enjoy these songs anymore than you have to be an alcoholic losing your third wife to enjoy regular country music. See how skiers use skiing as a crutch; and, if you want to hear a guy who "can sing like he don't need the money"---

DISCLAIMER:

Good skiboy-n-western music can be dangerous stuff, as it tends to be far more physical, mental, . . . and emotional . . . than other kinds of lyrics. It can be more dangerous than a dad watching and cheering his son at a wrestling meet. You might want to do some warm-up stretching exercises before reading some of these songs. The author and publisher cannot be held responsible for injuries suffered, by a reader . . . or from a reader, . . . whether physical, mental, or emotional, while reading or listening to these song lyrics.
