Christianity, Satanism, And Christian Satanism

A public domain book

Introduction: My future books are going to be around 80 pages. That's because there may not be very much time to work with. With how things are going in America I may not have a lot of time..

My goal for this book is to make it a digest. To make it a thin book that is easily gone through. At the same time it is my goal to briefly go over the most important things I have ever taught. This will be the thinnest book I have ever written, at 80 or so pages. I don't think Christianity or Satanism by itself needs to be explained. Especially Christianity. Christianity is Christianity. Things that come out of The New Testament. Then again there are so many different religions that it has produced. Mine is most closely related to Baptism. It is Christian Satanism that you may be most interested in learning about. That is if you haven't yet. If you have then there is more of it for you. If not then welcome onboard. It was something I began a long time ago with The Christian Satanic Bible. The Christian Satanic Bible was a book that took me six years to finalize. It is certainly its own thing among the books of Christian Satanism that I have written. The biggest reason for that is that my later books would come after such incredible experiences in life. I was homeless in San Francisco and the magic of the world widely opened itself up to me. I hear voices and things. I have visions. I'm schizophrenic.

Christian Satanism can be a few different things yet all of them at once. First, it can be either Christianity or Satanism by itself. A Christian Satanist going back and forth only makes themselves more Christian Satanic, naturally. It can be both at once through balance, something we call the Gray Side. It can mean Satanism through Christianity- can mean theistic Satanism based on the Bible. After all, the Devil from Christianity is within its own teachings. For some it is just a fun thing to do and call themselves, and that's fine. For others it is a serious religion. It is a religion of balance, gray side things like gray witchcraft and overall entails a lot of different things at once.

I guess all I can say is "know it to be it." I have already laid the foundation for it a great deal. This is a public domain book. It is a book you can find entirely free online. If you want a paper version there are those too. Of course in paper form it costs money. And thank you for buying any if you do. Not because I want the money but honestly, I want to know that I am reaching people. I both like the attention and the chance to make a positive change. I want fame. Not money. I have written over forty books as I'll list at the end of this book. All of them are free and in the public domain.

If you want to find me online the only website I really ever use is YouTube. I am Christian Satanist Lucifer White. It's mostly just a playlist thing for me though. Am not particularly after making friends. I like to listen to what people have to say more than I like to talk- here is where I talk. When I'm online I just listen.

Hope you enjoy my book and any support is appreciated. My religion is one that is free and one that does not have some type of Pope, or someone that you have to get approval from to talk about it or write about it. I don't even care if you personally sell my books without me getting paid or uploading it or sharing it or whatever else. Be free in that regard. Anyways the talk is over and the book begins.

The Book Of Christianity

This is an ordinary book of Christianity. You will later find that Christianity is different for the Christian Satanist. But being a Christian Satanist is, in part, solely being one then solely being the other for a time.

A momentary little aching in my soul and my Christian side needs to speak.

'Are we in the end times?'

As seriously as I want to take that, I fail to. Perhaps I am too wrapped up in the world. It isn't only that though- it is other things, like lack of faith, unfortunately. I guess I'm just waiting for that moment when all things come together, and the return of Jesus Christ is sure. After all, none but God knows the day.

I can say it is a pleasure to do God's will. What can be as important right now? In this awful darkness. In this wicked world full of bad people. As Jesus said "we are the light of the world." They all wonder what has happened to the world. The faithless do. We are in a world that has rejected God and turned to sin. It isn't that God doesn't care. It is our refusal to have Him with us. The only true wisdom comes from God. Without it, greatly bad things happen.

And God has a way of disappearing until the right time. He will let evil run its course. He will demonstrate the world's need for Him. He will not forget one innocent life lost. He will return with the angels and saints, His prophets, and His people, to set things right. As for the end times He will deliver us into The Rapture and evil will have to deal with itself.

Even if God doesn't have animals in heaven (though maybe He does) I pray He takes in Whacky, my white and black cat. I took that cat in as a stray. I wanted him to have a special life. And I could tell I meant everything to him. But the sad instance occurred when I lost my home and my friends insisted on taking care of him. Shortly after that their bull dog killed it. I meant for him to have a better life but instead it came to a horrible end. The only thing that can possibly make me feel better about it is my prayer that he is up there in heaven very happy, even happier than he could be down here. Maybe I'll even get to see Whacky again someday.

Maturity is an important thing these days. A Christian should focus on just that. There is a type of person called a Karen these days. They rage in an instant over menial things (often because their food order wasn't quick enough or things like a kid selling lemonade, things like that.) I can go over their nature: they think their rights are being violated, they think they own a certain right to be obnoxious, they are quick to call the police, and they like to accuse. I was once a Karen! I would fill out complaints and talk to the manager. Would call the cops over things I was at fault over. I changed though, totally. Early on in fact. I was a Karen before a Karen was a thing. My Kareness led me to jail. That's all it took for me to learn.

So my best advice for a Christian is to be mature. That means a lot of things really. It means to be patient and understanding most of all. To not act childish. To not be a brat, someone somehow spoiled by the world. It'll get you far. It will save you from disaster. That is, if these things apply to you to begin with.

Maturity but also peacekeeping, being lawful and civil minded. Those are qualities simply lacking anymore. But the goats are separated from the sheep. One God's people, the others the Devil's. The very meaning of the name Satan is "The Accuser." It is a Satanic trait. Those Karen's accuse people of nonsense left and right. It is because they think too highly of themselves in one way to describe it. Karens are complex beings.

The goats also include people that:

Are pro anarchy. Are anti law. Wicked. Selfish. Criminally behaving. And worst of all: desire to harm the innocent. It is all brought together by many bad things but I am sure you could make a distinction between the sheep and the goats. God will gather His own. He will protect and preserve them. There's the rapture for that. The weeds shall be thrown into the fire. I mean the worst of people. They'll lead themselves into destruction by their very ways. Remember this: the only true wisdom comes from God and His book, The Bible.

That book is what the world needs. Everyone is asking, why are these things happening? What went wrong? What went wrong is that we have abandoned and rejected God. He didn't reject us but we rejected him. Only the Bible could fix the problems we have. I don't mean that vicious and condemning Christianity. I mean true Christianity.

Very well the kind of people today could never bend their knee to anyone. Especially to Jesus Christ, the one that the spirit knows, but not the flesh.

If the newer generation is corrupt then we have modern leaders and teachers to blame. Like judging the fruit they produce, like "the proof being in the pudding," that though they and everyone may think they are being taught right, they apparently are not. There is another quality that a good Christian has. It is self discipline. The Bible goes over such a thing often.

Christianity however can make you feel better in a lot of ways. So long as you are not the condemning and judgmental kind. It's wasted energy to judge and condemn and be preoccupied with other people's sin. It is done in great handfuls by Christian and atheist alike. The greater portion has to be given to God. He has the whole world in His hands. Remember not to make the world's problems your own. Those that have entire careers speaking out against others spend little time on their spiritual life. Don't be like them. Spend more time on things such as spirituality, faith, and good deeds. A good deed is sometimes the best thing you can do for both yourself and the one you are helping.

We are all Christians in our own ways, to an extent. We uphold the general way (of love, spirituality) but it can be said that we all have our own job to do. Paul said just that. He went over that saying some are called to be teachers, others apostles and some prophets, ect. Just to say: we all play our part.

Jesus Christ said to not hate anyone in your heart. I take that seriously. It's for that reason that I don't use cuss words either in my mind or through my mouth. I learned that cuss words said inside make them likely to come out. Meaning that the problem should be stopped from its root. If you do not use cuss words inside your mind then you probably won't through your mouth either. Swearing goes hand in hand with hate. They carry with them anger. Other more polite words don't do that. I learned from Jesus and my Christian father to not use the word hate. Don't say it. Don't think about it. A Christian trait chooses understanding over judging.

I had this horrible neighbor until recently. She had such mental problems. To explain that, we all have them here. I live in a place for mentally ill people. She was entirely out of control however. She would yell for long periods in angry ways. She would hit my door with things and it wasn't long before she would bang on my very door with her fist threatening to kill me. I was miserable but never said a word to her. I had to write complaints about her. Something I only do if I absolutely have to. My nearby neighbors suffered the same and were also writing complaints about her and her behavior. Then one day she was evicted. The locks were changed. She demolished her room. And that was it. On that day though I didn't feel happy about it. I felt relieved. Didn't even feel justified so much as just relieved. I don't hate her. She has problems, the worse you could imagine, it seems. I prayed for her and went on with my life.

It says in the Bible (in Revelations) that in the end times demons will be let out of the bottomless pit. First let me say that I am no expert on the Book of Revelations, but perhaps it means that evil spirits will enter into people. This isn't without reason to say. Jesus expelled "Legion" which was many demons within a man that requested of Jesus they not be sent into the abyss. I think that makes more sense than physical demons coming out in droves. To look at so many people today it could be easily assumed they are possessed. If not lost, deeply lost, or taking drugs. Who knows though, maybe drugs themselves put evil in your body.

At any rate it is a people lost. Those driven into hedonism, selfishness, that have lost their souls to the world.

There was a time when I was in legal troubles, was bonded out, and living in my home in misery. I'd not confess my crime but hid it. Then something came over me. I felt sure that the rapture would happen at any moment. I think of it as a revelation from God. It wasn't that things about the rapture were on TV. I didn't even have a Bible. I had stopped reading the Bible for a long time. But this sureness about the rapture urged me to call my mother, confess that I was guilty, and to get a Holy Bible as quickly as I could. I went to my neighbor in a sort of panic asking for a Bible. He didn't. Neither did my other neighbor.. But soon after my mother took me to buy one.

The first thing I read was the first chapter of the Gospel of John (in the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God..) In my entire life I never felt so peaceful, so spiritual, so.. It was like the weight of the world fell from my shoulders. I like to think it must be what Heaven feels like. Maybe it is the feeling of John in his time, maybe the other disciples too.

I've had panic attacks before about dying and losing my mind. That I set off a trigger in my mind leading my mind to go haywire. That's the best I could describe it. A pastor I knew who counseled me would have panic attacks too. He said he didn't fear dying, just the transition. He knows there is an afterlife but it scares him to go from here to there. I personally hope in the rapture. I pray for a few things most commonly. To be protected in these times. My loved ones too (in my immediate family.) I pray to be led into God's Kingdom. For the forgiveness of my sins. And I have the Lord's Prayer in a few places in my little room.

Pray in thanks for all my good things, too. The Bible teaches us not to draw out prayers and it's good to know that God understands us just fine. He knows us better than we know ourselves. It is good to have enough faith not to pray for something over and over again. I feel I owe God enough faith and patience not to. And if it doesn't come about, whatever it is, that's okay. Me and you just have to accept that sometimes. However be wary of greedy types of prayers that only make you angry when you don't get what you asked for. As for me I don't expect God to tear the fabric of time to bring something about. Say I pray for my check to come in the mail on that day. Am I wanting God to magically make that happen? To place it in the mail man's hands out of thin air? Yes, God can do anything, however, that's just offensive to expect. To everything it's own time. That's how He made things to be. You don't plant a seed and expect crops the next day.

A good deed of mine is to send gifts to my family. My family is very important to me. I remember my joy of things when I was a child. Even for simple things like stickers. Kids appreciate things much more than I could anymore. And I could lose all I have but never lose the gifts I gave, if that makes sense. I do spend a fair amount on myself. I have a lot of things I am grateful for. My family sends me birthday and Christmas money.

Way back when there was no drug problem you could count on the homeless using the money right. I am not speaking bad of all homeless people but it has to be said that some of them are. Some are mentally ill. I was one such homeless person. I have never done drugs. Alcohol was never my thing either. Some homeless people are perfectly fine, just lazy. When you give to them they right away ask for more. It's their job: asking for money. So I would do what so many others do. Give them food. Give them a cold drink. An umbrella on a rainy day if you see them in the rain.

A lot of Christians don't consider this but science and technology could be a good thing to donate towards. It is those things that can be used to reduce human suffering. Maybe you yourself can even come up with a product that helps unfortunate people. I believe in universal basic income. That all get an amount of money to live off of, for free. It may not be entirely practical yet but with growing resources and machine work replacing human work it could be soon. Then again we may be at the end of the road, the time of Jesus' return. However maybe the new Heaven and the new Earth means that God will bring with Him such things. Where God rules, all the science and tech established on Earth. Through these a utopia. No more hunger. No more sickness. No more labor. No more death.

Through God and the Bible a person can truly mature. It improves people. People who know that in the legal system are far fewer unfortunately. My grandfather used to donate Bibles to the jail. There are those that would use the Bible to make it seem they've changed their ways. They are liars though. It is just a pretense. Speaking of liars in the religious field who are frauds, if money is their reward, then frauds they are. They can be divided into two kinds: those that outright are, and those that have fooled themselves into thinking it was God's blessing. They have personal jets, luxurious suits, mansions, and highly valuable things in their homes. Meanwhile.. so many are just wanting a meal that day not knowing where it will come from.

They are more like motivational speakers. They basically write self help books and sprinkle scripture on it. For some of them it is a power trip. For others it's just a sort of game. For some it is just a quick and easy job. It isn't God paying their bills. It's the Devil.

Christianity is looked down on because of those who abuse it. They are not Christians who do so. The corruption of it comes from Satan. Whenever you defame something you lessen it and make it appear foul. You even cause hatred of it. That is what the Devil has done.

The Devil would give you every last thing to take pleasure in. Worldly things, of the flesh, music, movies, of sin. It's the best way to keep God out of their lives. At the same time he stigmatizes Christianity. The Christians are the evil ones. They would take away every good thing from you. Meanwhile these false Christians are judging in such a way like it's double hair splitting. They even get paid too. They get quite a full purse from it. But a real Christian sees straight through it and is in no way fooled by it.

Consider that times change. Christianity shouldn't be used to triple double down on sin. Which they do so often in a strict and judgmental way. There is so much more that is needed apart from that stuff. That, instead of judging people, there are people who need help. There is a public out there that needs to see our better side. As for hellfire stuff it is to no effect. Don't bother. Those that preach Christianity should be as humble as could be. A person for all people like Paul said. As long as what he meant is not misconstrued- be agreeable. Don't rouse anger. Don't "cast your pearls among the swine," because they will trample on them and go after you.

It is not totally your fault if you are distracted by the world. That is another way that the world has changed. People in earlier times probably thought a great deal more about God. They didn't have so much more than the stars at night and good food. They didn't have this atheistic garble to deter them either. Our pride has been stripped too. Being an atheist is more acceptable these days. For all these reasons: TV, shopping centers, entertainment, and so on, it is understandable that we cannot focus as much on God as we should. Some do, I'm sure. Perhaps it can be said that a Monk residence and lifestyle goes further than it ever has. The same can be said of Amish people. Just beware of cult groups.

While I was in a hotel where I had to leave (ran out of money) I went to a Christian home I heard about. I would walk mighty far those days. The walk there took hours. When I arrived I could sense something was wrong. They'd accept me if I gave them my social security payment card and my cell phone. They searched me too. I just turned away from that place. I'd been good in my lifetime at turning away from bad things. I believe God gave me the sense to. The angels will protect you. God will show you good from evil. God loves all of His children. The Devil only comes to steal and kill.

God is our father. He cares about His children. We are His creation. God is not a murderer. God is good, Holy, and righteous. God is love. God is wise. He is the only true source of wisdom. To the Devil we are bastards. Satan hates God's children. We are not his creation. He is not good, not Holy, and not righteous. He would fool us in any way possible to make us think so. But Christians know him for what he is.

The world is not our affair. The world is doomed. Those that live for the world will be consumed by its end. That end is a great fire. Those who are worldly in sinful ways will hold onto it until their last breath.

There is not a more discussing thing I've seen when I see innocent people being harmed, or maimed, or killed. Those that have done no harm being brutally attacked because the assailer has no concept of the value of life. It hurts for me to bring up an example but here one is: a man was pulled out of his car over a vehicular accident.

While sitting on his knees still, afraid, a guy kicked him on his head so hard it knocked him out. Then the attacker called him a f'n racist.

No value for human life.

Everyone is pushing their own ideas. There is no convincing the other side whatsoever. Like a brick wall in between them. One they blindly talk to. They are lost in their own words and ideas. It's the cause that matters and the power behind it. They in fact are very intricately tied to their ideas. Meanwhile I am on no side. That's because I am Christian. The world and its doings are not objects of my obsession. They have created secular cults. As for me I am just waiting for the return of Jesus Christ and in the meantime being the Christian I should be. I will be loving. I will be forgiving. I will be preparing myself by doing good things in the world.

The Bible says to keep watch. To pray continually. While Jesus was in the garden he told that to his disciples. It says too to pay attention to the sign of the coming of Jesus Christ. After all, the whole book of Revelation is meant to reveal those times to us. Only pray for the right things. There are more important things than personally wanting greedy things.

Set straight the path of the Lord. Do not look behind you.

May the Light of God guide your path.

"Forgiveness is divine, but one should never pay full price for late pizza!" That was once a joke. Now, it goes more like this: A customer who doesn't get enough ketchup smashes the place up. Or maybe it was the lack of pizza sauce. These have happened. Things like that are increasing, too. There are things going on called smash and grabs. People brazenly smashing things like jewelry cases and stealing the loot. A Christian is the kind of person who might be sure the cashier gets the proper amount. It's in the ten commandments: don't steal. It's in the Bible that Satan is a thief. Therefore stealing is Satanic. So is lying, accusing, and killing. Those are hallmarks of modern America, unfortunately.

When a group of people are seen doing these things that group is added to. The more they are, the more others migrate towards it. They join each other. The group gets bigger and bigger, like a riot. A riot in fashion. "They can't stop us all." That leads to anarchy. Traditionally that leads to a police state. And the good people cry out for protection. The politicians start becoming victimized, then one way or another, it has to be stopped. Who better to stop it than a dictator? And that dictator is the antichrist.

Modern people carry the mentality that they can harm people in sneaky ways. For example using the old "first to throw a punch" concept: people have the right to say whatever they want to. Pretty much anyway. You can't make threats. You can cuss the hell out of someone though. So they get someone else to hit them just to call the police about an assault. Or say someone is being obnoxious. They are asked to leave because of it. Which they refuse and may say something like "you don't have any right to do that!" Then they are pushed a little. And they say "that's an assault!" Quickly call the police over. But most of the time they are the ones arrested, to their bewilderment. They in fact argue with the officer that it isn't right. They were attacked.

I've become an expert about these people. The bottom line is that they want to curve and turn around the law, as it is their source of power. To a reasonable person they act in a ridiculous way. They can be scary too. Violent, just crazy. They make up injuries and in an obviously fake way they wail about it. Then they await that lawsuit against the police. It never comes. And hopefully they learn to grow up after it. They are people that enter into a rage. They must not understand their own problems. Why is it that in an instant they go off? As though they are looking for something? Do you know what I think they are looking for? They are looking for God, and cannot find Him.

For they are lost. They have no spiritual backbone. They are physical, these people, not spiritual. Not in any way. Theirs is a world of pleasure/ pain. There is no substitute for Jesus Christ. Love is kind, love is patient, and is not self seeking..

But to move on from that: we have purpose in our lives. We were not meant to just simply do nothing. These things Solomon taught, that God gave us things on this Earth to preoccupy ourselves. The seasons change, for example, spring to winter keeps us doing different things. There is no end to work. One generation comes and another goes. As Christians we are God's crop. So let us be doing good all of our days. Through Jesus Christ we sow.

Some say that Jesus is our rest. Of course- he fulfilled the law. I am among those that believe this applies to the Sabbath. The work left is for Jesus Christ. "Work" is not quite the literal term- "good works, good fruit," to put it better.

Jesus is a remarkable figure. No one spoke as he did or ever well. The way he brought thoughts and terms and meaning together surely came from the mouth of God's Son. He was more than a man. He was without sin. He was God's Lamb. Through him we are without sin. We are a part of his body. But it is one we should not defile. Rather do it honor. To live and learn, to grow in wisdom, repent, and to pray for forgiveness.

Knowing none of us are perfect. Paul considered himself the most sinful person there could be. But he clearly had God's spirit within him and that's what counts.

It takes a foolish person to look at the world, the moon, the space above and not declare it the work of God. To think we descended from monkeys, likewise. Oh excuse me, "apes." God made the sun and the moon. One for a day. One for the night. Although they are so much different in size they appear the same size. He gave beauty to the earth and a complex system. I could never look at a flower and think there was nothing that made it beautiful. The odds of us existing are infinitely impossible if taken as science. Atheism simply offends my common sense.

There are a great number of religions. There are many religions within religions. But there are no two kinds of atheist. The atheist may not say it but they hate our guts. They think we are kind of stupid. They think we have bizarre delusions. They are offended because what we are "offends science." Yet they believe in such twilight zone stuff as multiple dimensions and would even entertain "simulated reality" ideas. So to them all religions are the same with not one being true. And as far as they are concerned they hope for the future when we leave these foolish things behind. For progress, for total acknowledgment of science without us in the way.

Christianity has been reduced in numbers a great deal. Just as the Bible has laid out again and again- people choose worldly things over righteousness. It's when the light grows dim that Jesus Christ returns. But they had to replace Christianity with something. It's making and circulation has been quite fast and full. It was a cult made from TV you could say. That and the internet. It is the worst of cults. The worst in all of history. Guided by morals that are often anti-Christian. Formed by twisted psychology. Cultivated in children to dubious ends. The law of selfishness, greed, and pleasure. Meanwhile they look around and wonder what has happened to the world. Quite badly they think it must be because there is a lack of these things (of their cause) not knowing it's the cause that is the problem.

Every day the murders grow. Killing even comes into fashion. TV says the worst things about it but as far as bad people go, it is just an inspiration, seemingly a display of might and fame for them. So I pray for your protection and mine while it continues. I pray that God separates us from them. Substantially enough that we are seen through and all the while guided into His Kingdom, as promised and sure as could be. Go forth with faith that God will keep you.

Jesus spoke of a person that was prepared. Others weren't. And she was asked for help but told them they should have been ready. That she only had things prepared for herself. Seems like Noah gave them every opportunity to save themselves, which they scoffed at and refused. God will declare the warning of destruction through His angels. That whoever takes the mark of the beast will be punished.

God didn't abandon us. We (meaning most people) abandoned Him. It's even worse than that- a lot worse. Our entertainment makes a joke out of him. It mocks both Him and His Son, Jesus Christ. Christianity is ridiculed. Sometimes demonized. God cannot baby us and say "pretty please do not do that." God gave humans free will, from the start, until now.

I hope however that you have joy in your heart knowing that our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ will return soon. I am not entirely confident of my salvation. I have been into the occult up until recently. A lifetime of that though going back and forth. I am here in my Christian form. I tried. I read the Bible and followed it. I believed in it and still do- I have always. I had a dream where God was with others talking to Him. I felt left out. Then God came up to me, brought me in His arms and carried me into Heaven.

Maybe things are bitter sweet for you. While bad things are happening, yet the end is possibly near, it is understandable.

When I was 7 I watched a movie about the end times. My Christian dad told me that it was from the Bible and was a thing that was going to happen. That brought up my interest greatly. In Revelations most of all, but Daniel, and other related books too. I would draw pictures described in Revelations. I got baptized shortly after that. For a lifetime I have waited for the return of Jesus Christ. A few years ago was a "maybe" for me. But things have a way of multiplying and they sure have. The worst has gotten much worse. I pray for the forgiveness of my sins and to be brought into God's Kingdom. I have turned greedy prayers into humble prayers. I ask that you pray for me in these regards.

Christianity isn't meant to be easy. Much of it is against human nature. It asks us to forgive others of their sins against us. Tell us to turn the other cheek. It says to give all that we can to the poor. A lot of people leave these out. Learning to forgive people might not come easy. My advice is to just let every little thing go. Like a lamb. Acknowledge that you are a sinner too. Remember there are better days for you in Heaven.

Forgiving people doesn't mean that you have to stay within the realm of their abuse. In fact God doesn't want us around bad people, so get yourself away from any abuse or bad influences.

Christianity moves slowly in certain ways (and in full, which is good.) It takes time to become a Christian. It takes time to learn and follow the Bible. Christianity in its earliest times moved quickly. It caught the world in a storm. It was a great contrast to pagan life. Its stories went far and wide. Christianity challenged sin and hedonism. It promoted love and decency. In the course of a few decades though it became among one of the most commonly ridiculed things. Its flaws were not its own. False Christians caused it to be stigmatized, through the Devil. He makes potentially good Christians rich and fat. He has judgmental hellfire things spew from their mouths. He causes "witches" to be executed.

Don't spoil your children. I have seen so many spoiled adults in town and on TV. I was getting a sandwich at a restaurant when a guy came in and asked for the restroom. When they told him they only had an employee bathroom he said "well I guess I'll have to piss on your sidewalk then." You don't find any worse behavior than you do with a spoiled person. Other than from those who were abused, anyway. You could say one is violent and the other is childish and immature.

Has the Bible ever taught you to do bad things? Or has it taught you good things? To not lie? To not steal? To not kill, accuse, judge, or blame? It teaches us maturity and disciplines us into good people. Does TV do that or does it glorify violence and sin?

Jesus Christ teaches us to make our roots strong. To build our homes with stone, not sand. That he is the foundation. Paul taught that our body is a temple. To start out slow, but sure. Where we lack as Christians though Jesus Christ makes up for. Salvation is a gift, not something we make for ourselves. And with God all things are possible.

As far as the Bible goes there is always more to learn. However once a Christian has really learned a lot and has it down, they have gone from the bottle to solid food. From crawling to walking. The emphasis then is on new born Christians. Not them. So as long as they are rooted deeply they are able to peacefully walk down the road of salvation without a need of being taught the way.

The world is in high gear to stop people from dying. Naturally, as a product of atheism. But I say to enjoy life and not carry the burden that they do.

Some Christian things are more for adults than children. Speaking of responsibilities and things, leave them for the adults, and let children enjoy their lives. Let them have their special cartoons, video games, parties, gifts, ect. Because it is how God made them: full of love and joy for life. At the same time take them to Church with you. Have a positive influence over them about Jesus Christ. They will turn out fine. Better, as they know that very one that gave them life.

"Blameless" is a powerful word. It means that you have done nothing at all to be blamed for. That all the things you do are acceptable. That what you do among others gives no reason to punish you. Peace keeping, civility, are words used more and more in the world of today. Unfortunately there are those that would frame you for things you didn't do. Prosecutors have become more effective than defenders. They laden people with ugliness. They strip apart someone's character to the bone. Very police sometimes plant drugs or gather to lie about them. Sometimes it's very serious, too, a whole lie that leads them to prison or death. Yes, these are evil people indeed.

May philanthropy, morality, and humanity prevail. If there is a war, only against evil. If there is punishment, without torture. There is no such thing as a good dictator and let the people be aware of this. The power of good has always been its own best reason. Evil upon evil cannot remain justified and may God act against it for all of our sakes.

When again will America become a nation for God? Our folly has begun to rapidly decline us. People search for a reason why things have fallen downward. So deep, in a pit.

I pray for a return to Christianity in this land. I pray that good people are protected until then. I pray the sheep will be gathered by our shepherd Lord Jesus, without bloodshed of our kind. Cancer, sickness, and death no more. A day to come when suffering is no more. That the cries to heaven are heard. That bad people are stripped of their power. That the things in the hands of greedy people fall through their fingers. A day of joy for the Lord's people. One of great brightness, like never before.

Make the call that Jesus Christ is returning. Tell them of the prophecy in Revelation. If you have no more around to speak to, then the best you can do is sit, wait, and pray. God is watching all of us. The best we can do is to help those who need it. To be doing good. To have prepared ourselves for impending disaster. If the rapture comes we may not need them but better safe than sorry. The Bible says it will be a time of destruction like never before nor ever will be again. A great difference a day can make- suddenly the eruption of a great war. Like World War 3. Anarchy can break out in every corner. Our peaceful lives shattered. It says that in these times some will be like in Noah's time. Celebrating, enjoying everything, until the day suddenly comes that things go wrong.

When did the world become broken? Abstract paintings are a good place to look. Splashes on a canvas totaling up to talent and great value represent a broken world. It is like sin dripping from a bucket. Ever so slowly, for so long. Just dripping out. Slightly tilted sometimes. But things came back into place. People would even pour out their cups into it. Righteous things, Holy things. People stopped doing that though. One sin would go in and another and people began taking it as a fountain.

I had a neighbor once who asked me to give him a soda. I cannot be in the environment of share-alls. I have just what I need, no more, no less. So I told him "no." I told him no because once you give something the giving is never ending. It really is. Just gets worse and worse. Am I unChristian because of it? I don't think so. First, my peers have just as much money as I do. Second, almost all of them take drugs. I remember once a guy taking meat out of the group freezer to sell. Get now owe later, it is not a lifestyle I can appreciate. The Bible says to give to the poor. But I am poor. According to Solomon sharing a purse like that is a sin. Look at it this way: one disciple asks another for their money when he has just as much as them. He wants more and that would be taking advantage of his friend.

I think of hustlers as just another form of thief. Let me elaborate on that with a friend of mine. My friend gives people almost everything he has. He doesn't know any better. Others can know that when payday is coming around they can strike it big. On that day everyone is wandering around looking for him. Some even take him out in private. No doubt saying things like he should give him the most. In fact that's just what his phone friend does. The guy works hard for his money! I am the only person in his life that refuses him.

When the Israelites of old defied God a hedge of protection was removed. God wanted to be in their lives. God is not a Father that abandons His children. With His wisdom He returned His people to Him. To this day Israel stands. It is not a nation without its King. Its King is Jesus Christ. Look around the world and behold all that God has made. Then just think how wonderful His Kingdom must be.

God will not leave the world in darkness. He will never abandon you or me. He will not allow evil to live on. He will wholly remove it and establish all good things. When He returns with His Kingdom it will be a utopia through and through.

Christianity will teach someone self control. It will teach you to be slow to anger. It teaches people to hold their tongue. It teaches us not to cuss. To not forespeak over things. Teaches self discipline. Reservation. Forgiveness. Love. As a result our flesh does not dictate us how to think and behave. We believe in peace. We believe in harmony.
